

MATTER

The ground beneath your feet, the air around you, and the stars in the sky are made of matter. You are made of matter, too. All matter is made of minute particles called atoms, which join together in countless ways to form an astonishing variety of substances.