

It causes gaseous exchanges to take place in the lungs by ensuring that oxygen is carried to the blood through inspiration, and carbon dioxide is eliminated from the blood through expiration.

gas exchanges

During inhalation, oxygen from the air passes into the blood via the alveoli; carbon dioxide passes from the blood to the alveolus and is evacuated during exhalation.

