

BREATHING UNDERWATER

A continual supply of oxygen from the air is vital for the human body. Without it, brain cells start dying in large numbers after only five minutes. Scuba divers breathe air underwater from a compressed-air tank carried on the back. One tank has enough air to last 45 minutes.