

Just like a car, your body needs a supply of fuel to keep you going. All your energy comes from food, which your digestive organs break down into simple molecules for your body to absorb.

