

TESTING THE WATER

In the past, doctors used uroscopy—or urine gazing—to help them diagnose diseases, as shown in this 15th-century woodcut. They would examine the color, smell, and cloudiness of a patient's urine. Sometimes doctors would also taste it!

