

Hours per week

Experts say that watching more than 2 hours of TV per day (14 hours per week) can be bad for your health, yet in many countries, people watch twice that.

49 PERCENT
OF AMERICANS
SAY THEY WATCH
TOO MUCH TV

Content streaming

“Terrestrial” channels reach your TV via an aerial on your home, while extra channels can be broadcast by satellite or sent through cables. Paying for cable TV has become steadily less popular with the rise of television streaming services such as Netflix, however, which involve playing video content over an Internet connection. Since the content isn’t live, viewers can choose exactly what they want to watch, and when. In 2020, the streaming subscription market grew by a massive 37 percent.